School based occupational therapy
Enabling participation through occupation

Occupational therapists support children with special needs performing activities of daily life at school.

Enabling children to participate in educational and social aspects of being a student.

(Frolek, Clark & Chandler, 2013)
Study Design

Situatedness in a social, political and cultural context.

(Josephsson & Alsaker, 2015)

Narrative research designs give language to occupational therapists thought processes, thus proceeding to develop practice in a new context.

(Mattingly, 1991)
Findings

- Bringing in an occupational therapy perspective
- Understanding the education context
- Reflections on the occupational therapy perspective
- Focusing on school related occupations
- Doing and being with the others
- Easier for one easier for all
- Developing collaboration with different inclusion players
- Together on the way
- Building bridges
Sue:
• «The most important thing, we have to go on the way with people...each setting is different and as therapist you can only observe, see what is there and work from there»

George’s key question:
• «Who needs support, what kind of support can be considered, who renders the support, how is it implemented and who finances it?»
• Interventions are most effective when active collaboration can be developed
• Key factors:
  • flexibility in their approaches
  • naming things, which don’t work

• Connect a larger support environment also outside the school
• Bridge the gap between home and school
• Bridge health and education system
Further steps

Inter-professional approaches

Include children’s perspective to develop practice
• Retrospective as young adults?
